CROW BASEBALL LEAGUE REORGANIZES

At a well attended meeting held in Blaimore on Sunday last, it was decided to form a baseball league, with the following clubs entered: Coleman, Michel, Fernie and Blaimore.

Election of officers resulted in J. V. McDougall, of Blaimore, being elected president; Roscoe Delini, of Hillcrest, vice-president, and Alrik Tiberg, of Blaimore, secretary-treasurer, re-elected. A vote of thanks was passed to the retiring president, F. A. Gregory, for his work during his two-year term.

The schedule has not yet been fully drawn up, as it is expected Bellevue might decide to enter a team. At any rate it was decided to start the season with two games on Sunday, Fernie at Blaimore and Coleman at Michel.

A new rule adopted provides that any team failing to finish out its league games will be fined $10 for each forfeited game, and if the fine is not paid will be barred from further competition in the Crows' Nest Pass Baseball League.

CANADIAN LEGION ASKS SUPPRESSION OF "FIFTH COLUMNS"

Ottawa, May 20.—Urgent demands that the Dominion government take immediate steps to suppress "Fifth Column" activities in Canada, to ban German language publications and all German language meetings, as well as to investigate non-enemy aliens, especially those whose countries are displaying anti-British tendencies, are contained in resolutions being received at Dominion Command headquarters of the Canadian Legion, J. R. Bowler, M.B.E., general secretary of the Legion, announced today.

The resolutions are being wired from Legion branches in many parts of Canada and immediately upon receipt are placed in the hands of the government, Mr. Bowler stated. He added that they will be dealt with during the Legion's Dominion convention to be held in Montreal this month.

Internment of all German citizens now resident in Canada and the investigation of all enemy aliens who have become naturalized since the close of the first Great War is also urged in the resolutions. Non-enemy aliens should be registered and their migration from one part of Canada to another should be allowed only under special permit. The resolutions also demand that all internment camps be placed under the administration and control of units consisting exclusively of ex-servicemen especially enlisted for this purpose.

Mr. Bowler said that a number of the resolutions expressed disapproval of releasing so many Germans who had previously been in internment camps and strongly recommend the government to take immediate action against all subversive elements that might endanger Canada's war effort.

About forty members of Coleman lodge attended the regular meeting of Blaimore Lodge of Elks on Tuesday night, when three candidates were initiated to membership. Features of the meeting were the return of the travelling gavel left at Coleman about a month ago and presentation of a gold-plated cigarette case to Bro. Racette, who is leaving Blaimore at the end of the present school term to take up residence in Calgary. Following the meeting refreshments were served.

SUGGEST AID WAR MEASURE

Toronto, May 20.—While Mr. Justice Chevrier of the Ontario Supreme Court ruled the Communist party of Canada was an illegal organization, Attorney-General Conant told a service club that Communists and other subversive elements in Canada should be interned immediately. "Are we going to wait until some major catastrophe occurs to wake up to the fact that there are enemies within our gates?" he asked.

Millions of thistles are being grown in England for finishing high grade cloths. The thistle heads are used in cloth manufacture of two varieties, one for the very heavy but smooth uniforms of British naval officers, the other for a specially soft lightweight cloth with a texture like doekin, produced solely for export to the United States, where it has become fashionable as sports or holiday wear among well-to-do Americans.

MONTALBETTI—FREY

The many friends of Miss Geraldine Frey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frey, of Pincher Creek, and popular member of the Blaimore teaching staff, and of Lanco-Corp. Eugene James Montalbetti, of the Royal Canadian Engineers, Calgary, were surprised over the week end to learn that they had joined the great army of benedicts.

The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Neil Wilson in Calgary at 2.30 Saturday afternoon, with Rev. Captain A. E. Larke officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Margaret Price, while Sapper Albert Chappell, also of the R.C.E., acted as best man.

Following the ceremony, the young couple proceeded to Blaimore, where the bride will continue teaching till the close of the school term. Lance-Corporal Montalbetti returns to Calgary today, and hopes to proceed from there with troops very shortly. WANT COMPULSORY

DRIVERS' TESTS

Demand for compulsory examinations of applicants for drivers' licenses in Alberta are being made in some parts of the province. The suggestion already has been advanced in Calgary and is favored in Edmonton and elsewhere.

When directors of the Alberta Motor Association hold their regular meeting next month, it is expected that this will be one of the questions to receive consideration.

Promoters of the new proposed regulation point out that compulsory examinations are held in British Columbia and other parts of the country. It is claimed that Alberta should get in step with other provinces.

In British Columbia the license fee is $1, while an additional dollar is charged for a driver's examination.

Provincial government officials do not appear disposed to make a change from the present system, however, pointing out that all possible care is exercised now in issuing drivers' licenses.

Also, it is pointed out that the great percentage of motor accidents involve experienced drivers and not those who have been handling cars for merely a short period. In most cases accidents were due to reckless or careless driving on the part of old hands at driving, it is claimed.

CANADA SETS EXAMPLE

The Canadian Army has undoubtedly better services for its Army than any other armed force in the world today. The Canadian Dental Corps has realized the ideal of one dental officer to 500 men, in comparison to one officer to seven or eight thousand during the last war. Dental fitness has achieved equal importance to physical fitness.

LICENSE FEES ADJUSTED

In order that officers and other ranks, who are transferred from one province to another, will not be required to pay full license fees for their cars twice, an arrangement is proposed whereby a provisional license fee will be fixed by amending existing laws. Seven provinces have already provided for a $2 rate for the balance of any one year for license plates. Similar adjustments are forthcoming from the two other provinces in Canada.

The tutelage lasted the best part of a year, and then the quiet young man suddenly came to life, dismissed his worldly and pious companion with a check for £1000, summoned Mrs. Edwins to be his housekeeper and bought and reconstructed the Duke of Greenharts' house in Park Lane.

And thenceforward Mr. Harlow's name began to appear in the records of important transactions. Family fortunes dropped into his lap. Miss Mercy had been comparatively rich and had left him every penny of her fortune, with the exception of "£100 to Lucy Edwins in recognition of her faithful service, realizing that she will not regard this sum as inadequate in view of the great service I rendered to her between the years 1891 and 1897." Then Miss Henrietta died, and when the death duties were paid there was the greater part of two millions. Miss Alice left more. The bachelor uncle in New York died a comparatively pauper, leaving a beggarly eight million dollars.

The Colossus at Home
Mr. Harlow's house was a rather ugly three-story building which occupied a small island site, possibly the most valuable in Park Lane, though the actual entrance was not in that exclusive thoroughfare, but in the side street. He opened the door with a key and walked into the hall. His library immediately faced him. There were some letters on the table, which he scanned through rapidly, opening only one. It was from Ellenbury, and just then Mr. Harlow was annoyed with Ellenbury;

he had supplied erroneous information about Allen Rivers, and had made him look a fool.

He read the letter carefully, and then dropped it in the fire and watched it turn black.

"A useful man, but a thought too anxious. It was a mistake perhaps to keep him so tight. He must be let down," Mr. Harlow decided. A little of his own confidence must be infused into his helper. Too great a desire to please, too present a fear of failure; those were Ellenbury's weaknesses.

Mrs. Edwins

He pressed an ivory push-button on his desk, and sitting down, reached to the wall, slid back a panel, and took out a small black bottle, a siphon and a glass. He poured out barely more whiskey than enough to cover the bottom of the tumbler, and added it to the top with soda water. The glass was half empty when Mrs. Edwins, his housekeeper, came in without knocking. A tall, yellow-faced woman, with burning black eyes, she showed nothing of the slowest or deprecatory that might have been expected in a woman near 70.

"You rang?"

Miss Mercy's maid of other days had a voice as sharp and clear as a bugle note.

She stood before the desk, her hands behind her, her eyes fixed on his.

"Yes," he said, turning over his letters once more. "Is everything all right?"

"Everything."

Like a bugle note and with some of a bugle's stridency.

"Couldn't we keep a servant in the house," she asked. "The hours are a little too long for me. I didn't go to bed until 1 o'clock yesterday, and I had to be up at 7 to let them in."

It was a curious fact that no servants slept at No. 704 Park Lane. There was not a house of its size, or an establishment of such pretensions in all the country where every servant from butter to kitchen wench, "slept out." Mr. Harlow's excuse to his friends was that the room was too valuable for servants, but he denied this by hiring an expensive house in Charles street for their accommodation.

"No, I don't think it is necessary," he said, pursing his lips. "I thought you understand that."

"I might die, or be taken ill in the night," said Mrs. Edwins dispassionately, "and then where would you be?"

He smiled.

"It would be rather a case of where would you be, I think!—and then where would you be?"

She considered her answer before she replied.

"Somebody called, that was all," she said, "but I'll tell you about that afterward."

He was amused.

"A good many people call. Very well-behaved."

He got up from his chair and walked out of the room, and she followed. There was a tiny elevator in the hall, big enough for two, but she declined this conveyance.

"I'll walk," she said, and he laughed softly.

"You were complaining about feeling tired just now," he retorted, as he closed the grille before the little lift.

He pressed the top button, the elevator moved swiftly and noiselessly upward and came at last to a stop on the third floor, where he stepped out to a square carpeted landing from which led two doors. Here he waited, humming softly to himself, until the woman came in sight around the bend of the stairs.

"You're an athlete," he said pleasantly, and jerking out his pocket chain, selected a small key and opened the door on the left.

Marling!

It was a big and artistically furnished apartment, lit from the cornice by concealed light and from the floor by two red-shaded lamps. In one corner of the room was an ornate wooden bed, of red lacquer, decorated with Chinese paintings in gold. At a small Empire desk near one of the windows, which were heavily curtained, sat a man. He was almost as tall as Mr. Harlow, and the features which would have arrested the attention of a stranger were his big, dome-shaped forehead, which in spite of his age—and he must have been as old as Harlow himself—was untinted with gray.

He was reading, one thin hand on his cheek, his eyes fixed upon the book that lay on the desk, and not until Mr. Harlow spoke did he look up.

"Hallo, Marling!" said Stratford Harlow gently.

The man leaned back in his chair, closed the book, mechanically marking his place with a thin tortoise-shell paper knife.

"Good evening," he said simply. "Time you had your walk, eh?"

There was a second door in the room, and toward this Mr. Harlow glanced.

"Yes, I suppose it is," said the man, and rose.

He wore a short dressing jacket of dark blue velvet; his feet were encased in red morocco slippers. His glance strayed back to the closed book, as though he were reluctant to have his reading interrupted.

"The Odes of Horace," he said; "an English translation, but full of errors."

"Yes, yes," smiled Mr. Harlow. "It's rather late for Horace."

"You know who you are, my friend?" he asked.

The besotted man put his white hand to his forehead.

"I am Saul Marling, a graduate of Balliol," he said.

Mr. Harlow nodded.

"And—anything else?" he asked.

Again the hand went up to the dome-shaped forehead.

"I forget * * * how absurd! It was something I saw, wasn't it?" he asked anxiously.

"Something you saw," agreed Mr. Harlow, "just before Miss Mercy died."

"The other heaved a sigh. She was very kind to me in all my little troubles. Awfully suddenly. She used to sit on the chair talking to you, and then one night after dinner she fell down."

"On the floor," nodded Mr. Harlow, almost cheerfully. "But you saw something, didn't you?" he encouraged.

"A little bottle and some blue stuff. Wake up, Marling! You remember the little bottle and the blue stuff?"

The man shook his head.

"Not clearly * * * that was before you and Mrs. Edwins took me away. I drank the white powders—they fixed like a sedlitta powder—and then—"

"To the country," smiled Harlow.

"You were ill, my poor fellow, and we had to prescribe something to quieten you. You're all right?"

"My head is a little confused—" begins the man, but Harlow laughed, caught him almost affectionately by the arm and, opening the narrow door, led his companion up a flight of steep stairs. At the top of this was another door, which Mr. Harlow unlocked. They were on the roof of Greenhart House, a wide, flat expanse of asphalt, confined within a breast-high parapet. For half an hour they walked up and down, arm-in-arm, the bigger man talking all the time.

The fog was thick, the street lamps shined themselves below as patches of dull yellow luminosity.

"Cold? I told you to put on your scarf, you stupid chap!" Mr. Harlow was good-humored even in his annoyance. "Come along, we'll go down."

The woman was standing by the door, stiffly erect, her hands folded in front of her, her dark eyes on her master.

"Do you know who you are, my friend?" he asked.

The besotted man put his white hand to his forehead.

"I am Saul Marling, a graduate of Balliol," he said.

Mr. Harlow nodded.

"And—anything else?" he asked.

Again the hand went up to the dome-shaped forehead.

"I forget * * * how absurd! It was something I saw, wasn't it?" he asked anxiously.

"Something you saw," agreed Mr. Harlow, "just before Miss Mercy died."

"Cold? I told you to put on your scarf, you stupid chap!" Mr. Harlow was good-humored even in his annoyance. "Come along, we'll go down."

In the room below he fastened the door and gazed approvingly around the comfortable apartment. He took up one of the eight volumes that lay on a table. They still wore the publishers' wrappers and had arrived that day.

"Reading maketh a full man—you will find the Augustan histories a little heavy even for a graduate of Oxford, eh? Good night, Marling—sleep well."

He locked the door and went out to the landing with Mrs. Edwins. Her hard eyes were fixed on his face, and until he spoke she was silent.

"It's quite all right," he said.

"In 'eh?" Her harsh voice was disagreeable. "How can he be all right if he's reading and writing?"

"Writing?" he asked quickly.

"What?"

"Oh, just stuff about the Romans, but it reads sensible."

Taken For Granted

Despite Uncle Sam's monetary pile currently estimated at more than $18,000,000,000 in gold and $3,750,000,000 in silver, no inventory of that bewildering treasure has ever been made by the government's official auditing bureau, the General Accounting Office, to see if the precious metal is actually there where it's supposed to be.

Ultimate Speed Of Planes

Expected To Be Reached In Not Too Distant Future

The Hamilton Spectator says: Aviation was given its stimulus in the Great War of 1914-18, and the progress made during those years was considered to be extraordinary, as indeed it was. But pioneer aviators who look back from this day, and compare the modern plane with its predecessor of a quarter of a century ago, marvel at the feats that pilots in the previous conflict were able to perform.

The war plane of to-day is almost as different to the plane of the Great War as the Queen Mary or the Normandie is to an Atlantic liner of 30 years ago. Aviation was in its infancy during 1914-18, yet even today, with all its amazing advances, it is still in the adolescent stage, say some experts. Its evolution goes steadily on, until the prophets themselves hesitate to say what the limit may be.

Rear-Admiral John T. Towers, Chief of the Naval Aeronautics Bureau of the United States, ventured an opinion in Washington the other day that war planes of the future will travel as fast as sound—750 miles an hour. He made no reference to rockets, but believed the ultimate speed of planes would be reached in the not-distant future.

"We are afraid there is a limit to speed," Admiral Towers told the Senate Naval Affairs Committee. "At the rate plane speeds have been mounting recently you might think we would soon be going 1,000 miles an hour. But when speed approaches the velocity of sound, we appear to be stopped at the present outlook."

His prediction in itself reflects the great progress that has been made. Speeds that would have sounded incredible and fantastic a few years ago are now accepted as probabilities. A plane travelling at 750 miles an hour is zooming through space at 12½ miles a minute.

Truly, the plane is slicing the meaning from the word "distance," and adding a new dimension to the world's geography. In the world of tomorrow it may prove to be a tremendous factor for good in the march of human destiny.

World-Famous Spas Bankrupt

And Hotel Industry in Germany Not Much Better Off

Germany's world-famous spas at Carlsbad, Marienbad, and Zouchenath are bankrupt. The ministry of justice has taken possession and are acting for their debtors. Their fate has been shared by three other spas. In the Sudetenland, but these are not named. The whole German hotel industry is in little better plight.

According to a well-informed source the Hotel Keepers' Association have presented a petition stating that hotels represent an invested capital of $1,725,000,000, and are mortgaged to the extent of nearly $1,500,000,000 granted by private banks and insurance companies. Owing to the war the interest on these mortgages cannot be paid except by the hotels in the big cities.

The petitioners beg the government not only to cancel the interest by order, but to provide ways and means of carrying on the hotel business.

COURT CLEARS DOMINION
TEXTILE IN TAXATION CASE

Ottawa, May 20.—Holding that Dominion Textile Company made no incorrect or false income tax returns, concealed no relevant fact and fully paid the taxes assessed upon it, Mr. Justice A. K. Macleod of the Exchequer Court of Canada disposed of the allegations made in 1937 by Mr. J. C. McRuer, counsel for the Royal Commission inquiring into the textile industry, to the effect that full disclosures of income had not been made. The court ruled that the requirements of the law had been completely met by the company.

NEW SEASICKNESS CURE

A series of experiments to cure seasickness were made recently by Dr. William Boothby on board a liner. There are many types of remedies, more or less effective, but Dr. Boothby's method employs oxygen as a cure. He makes victims wear a special face mask which leaves the mouth exposed and permits the taking of food. As soon as seasickness threatens, oxygen is administered through the nose, and although seasick passengers in their queer masks cause some amusement at meal times, the great benefit which they feel makes up for this. It is likely that the success of the experiments will lead to the use of less cumbersome outfits, and in future oxygen masks for curing seasickness may become part of the standard equipment of all ocean liners. If this becomes the case, one of the greatest fears of sea voyagers will have been overcome.

It has been decided that the Calgary Normal School will remain.

Here's a masterpiece sent in a few days ago that may be worth placing in your scrapbook:

Gott! Dear Gott! Additions, please!
Your bardner Hitler's here,
Und has a word or two to say
Indo your brivate ear.

So durn away all odders now
Und listen vell to me,
For what I say concerns me much,

You know, dear Gott, I vas your

Und from mein horn of birth
I quietly let you rule der Heffan,

Und when I toldt mein soldiers
Of bygone battle days,

Und gif you half der braise.

In efery way I dried to brove
Mein heartd to you vas true,
Und only claimed mein honest share
In great deeds vot ve do,
You couldnt not haf a badder friend!
In sky or landt or sea
Dan Adolf Hitler number von,
Der Lord of Shermany.

Now vot I say, dear Gott, is dis:
Dat ve shouldt met friends,
Und you shouldt help to sendt mein

To meet der bitter, endts.
If you, dear Gott, vill dis men do,

But listen, Gott, it must be quick
Your help to me you send,
Or else I aff ter stop attack

Because you vas mein bardner, Gott,
An extra shance is giften;
So help at vonce, or else I'll be

AERIAL PHOTOGRAPHY
PLAYS IMPORTANT PART

The important part played by aerial photography in the developing of Canada's natural resources is revealed in the annual report of the department of mines and resources, Ottawa, for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1939, which has been tabled in the house of commons. This particularly reflected, the report states, in the large number of visits to the photographic library by engineers, prospectors, geologists, timber operators and others to examine photographs covering areas in which they were interested.

Some 55,900 new photographs were added to the library during the year, bringing the total available for examination to about 784,500 prints. These cover an area of approximately 840,000 square miles, well distributed over the different provinces. A total of 18,800 square miles of the drought areas in Saskatchewan and Alberta were photographed during the year. Of the resulting 14,480 prints, some 10,000 were indexed, interpreted and assembled in municipality folders, of which 112 were forwarded to the western authorities. This work involves a detailed analysis of the air photographs, in which land classification and utilization, natural drainage, water storage and possibilities of irrigation are studied.

Common Sense In Dietary

When doctors disagree the average layman can do little more than shake his befuddled head and groan in anguish and bewilderment, and since the medical profession sponsor differing viewpoints on nearly everything that adversely affects the health of the human body, the cause of ailments and their cures—the welkin should be ringing with the moans of suffering humanity.

There are, of course, a few fundamentals which the medicos have generally accepted and upon which they now generally agree. It is doubtful if, to-day, a doctor could be found who would dispute the germ theory as the causative agent of certain specified diseases. These germs have been so definitely isolated and experimented with over a sufficient period of time with such definite results that there is no gainsaying the truth of the tenets of this theory. It is accepted as fact, not by any school of medical thought or by any faction, but by the entire fraternity.

When we go on from here, however, controversy, sometimes of quite violent character enters into theories, policies and practices of the profession.

Consider, for example, the highly important question of diet as a factor in the health of the individual. Some doctors have told us, if we wish to be healthy, to avoid starches. Others have said "no fats." Another school of thought was wont to denounce the practice of partaking of two different proteins at a single meal. One group of doctors have told their patients to limit their intake to two meals a day, if they wish to avoid digestive disturbances. Others have adopted "little and often" as their motto.

The Caloric Age

We have had the fruit juice diet and the Hollywood diet has had its vogue. Some doctors would train their patients down to the proportions of a lath, promising longevity and health as a reward for self denial. Other medical men consider their clients in first class condition when they have built them up to "pink portliness"—not too fat, you know, but comfortably plump.

One does not have to hark back very far to remember the time when the calory was the yardstick of the value of diet. In those days the housewife who had proper regard for the care of her family was supposed to know that there were twice as many calories in an egg as in a pound of beefsteak—or perhaps it was the other way around. In any event, the lady of the house was expected to tot up the number of calories in all the ingredients for the pending meal and they must reach the proper total to nourish papa, herself and junior—the total required by father depending upon whether he worked with a pick and shovel or wielded a pen. Even some of the restaurants published in the menu the number of calories each dish placed before the patron represented.

That was in the palmy days before the vitamin appeared upon the stage, which was about the time the depression era was ushered in. Now the calory has been routed and the vitamin is having its innings. The vitamin appears to be a prolific family and it's growing almost every day. The first to be discovered was labelled Vitamin A. It was not very long before B appeared on the scene, followed in succession by C and D. It is not safe to say how many letters have been used in the vitamin nomenclature for, by the time this appears in print, there will probably be another one and what is going to be done when the alphabet has been exhausted it is hard to say. Someone must have sensed the problem looming up for they are now splitting them and we have with us B1 and B2.

Back To Commensense

Each of these vitamins has a different function in the human frame and each has its effect upon some entity of the body. For instance, Vitamin A is said to have a beneficial effect upon the glands, or some of them. The amount of calory required to ensure a health balance depends upon the condition or requirement of the entity which it influences.

We are told that, while the calories have yielded the spotlight to the vitamins, the former are still important and should still be measured and weighed along with the vitamins if our daily meals are to do us the maximum of good and the minimum of evil. In the matter of diet we have entered the realm of chemistry and mathematics and the problem of feeding for health has become so complicated that housewives will have to take degree courses, or else we will have to suffer the consequences, they say.

On the medical horizon is appearing the school of thought which, while not prepared yet to ditch the calories and vitamins theories altogether, believes that it is the part of wisdom, at least for the general public, to forget about these yardsticks of nutriment and that it is time for commonsense in the matter of eating and drinking to appear before the footlights. "No time is coming when we may expect to again hear such long-forgotten injunctions as "eat in moderation," "eat what appears to agree with you," "eat slowly" and "eat when you are hungry."

Sufferings Of The Czechs

How Hitler Has Kept His Word To Jewish Country

"That which the best and wisest Czechs have struggled for decades to attain is as a matter of course granted to this people in the National Socialist Reich—namely, the right to their own nationality and the right to foster this nationality and to revive it." These are the words of Hitler spoken in the reichstag on April 28, 1939, less than 12 months ago. If anybody wishes to know how this benevolence has expressed itself he can find full particulars in the recent number of the "Central European Observer."

The sale, and even the reading, of books by the chief Czech-Slovak writers is forbidden; the schools have been compelled to revise their historical textbooks; Czech universities and schools of university rank have been closed and their libraries and laboratories pillaged; the only university left in the country is a German university and no Czech student may be admitted. No Czech can study to be a doctor, judge, lawyer, professor, engineer, research worker, civil servant, or secondary-school teacher.

These are the privations that the Czech people suffer in respect of their culture. Of the positive atrocities inflicted Dr. Benes said on March 29 that a house in Prague had been turned into a torture chamber where cruelties are practised more terrible than those inflicted on Jews in concentration camps.

This is all part of the deliberate policy to turn the Czechs and the Poles into serf peoples for the convenience of German masters. A quarter of a million Czechs and Slovaks have been transported to Germany where they work under servile conditions. Entire Czech villages have been emptied in this way to make room for German immigrants. The treatment of the Czechs and Poles is worse than anything suffered by the Poles and the Hungarians in the 40's and 50's of last century at the hands of Russia and Austria.—Manchester Guardian.

Attitude Of The Neutrals

Difference Shown Before And After The Invasion

Belgium and The Netherlands, knowing for months before than any others the imminent peril of a German invasion, still held the Allies at arm's length—even after the example of Denmark and Norway. Just a few days ago a Netherlands newspaper published that complaints by Queen Wilhelmina's government concerning Allied economic warfare "did not always meet with the desired response." "The best that could be obtained," it added, "was in such cases the promise that the interests of neutrals would, as far as possible, be taken into account." At that very moment Germany was planning the destruction of Holland, the murder of her people.

But when the Hung crossed their frontiers Belgium and Holland appealed to Britain and France for help, which was instantly forthcoming.

It would seem every neutral would have realized before this that there is no safety in German promises, no security from war in their actual or comparative helplessness. Good faith, honor and decency are words long since dropped from the German vocabulary. Germany is a nation dedicated to conquest, and its insatiable greed takes no account of peaceful neighbors who ask nothing more than that they should be left alone.

The world has come to a dreadful pass through the ruthless ambition of a race of brigands and murderers. Germany's power has to be destroyed, no matter how prodigious the effort required and the sacrifices, or there is no security for anyone anywhere in the world.

Britain and France have taken upon the burden all decent people should be sharing, carry a terrific load. If they cannot stop Hitler, then Hitler will not be stopped short of world domination. Upon their leaders, their armed forces, their stout-hearted civilians, to-day rests literally the fate of civilization.—Ottawa Journal.

Western Farmer Finds His Acres Suddenly A World Stage

As the spring of 1940 quickens in the deep soil of the Prairies, the Western farmer discovers he has an altogether different status from that of last spring, states The Printed Word. No longer is he a problem child putting grey hairs in the heads of governments. No longer do people shake their index fingers at him and say that he never should have taken up that land in the first place. No longer do they pass him hand-me-downs and sigh for the economic futility of it all.

The Western farmer has become a figure of vast significance. His acres are suddenly a world stage. As he sets out to make a crop, Britain is watching him and hoping that the gods of rain and frost and hail and rust and sunshine will be kind. Germany is watching him and wishing he were an easier man to frighten and subdue. Probably also watching him and secretly hoping he makes his crop are those other expert farmers, the Danes, with the whip of the invader on their backs.

Always Hated England

Australian Musician Tells About Feeling In Germany 40 Years Ago

Percy Grainger, bushy-haired Australian musical genius, went to Toronto with a sheaf of unfinished musical manuscripts and the startling announcement that he has been afraid this war was coming ever since 1896.

"Everything that Hitler has said is merely putting into words the feeling I found in my German fellow-students 40-odd years ago," he told the Toronto Telegram. He was a student at Frankfurt, where his mother taught.

"They despised small nations then and hated England with consuming, envious hate. They were interested in ships and their tonnage and guns. It seemed to be then that our whole race was threatened. Their narrow nationalism even then was a good indication that they intended to swell out across smaller contiguous countries, to swell like a boil.

Add to further atrocities, which Hitler has thrust upon the world, that of "German tea," an abominable concoction which English tasteful have pronounced to be too horrible for words.

Britain Holds Near East

Check On German Attempt To Stir Up Tribal Uprisings

Great Britain's trump card against possible German-backed revolt in the Near East is an Englishman with a scar on his chin and a host of Bedouin fighters at his back.

Desert revolt would be a direct threat to the lifeline of Britain's Mediterranean fleet—the pipeline that carries Britain's chief oil supply from Iraq to Haifa.

On the records in London the man with the scar on his chin is listed as Major John Blubb, organizer of the Desert Patrol of the Arab Legion; but among the burning hills of Transjordan, tribesmen with fighting on their minds about his name proudly as Abou Heinel—the man with the jaw, the uncrowned prince of Arabia.

While the major holds in check any Transjordan attempt to stir tribal uprisings in the interior, Australian, New Zealand, French, British, Indian, Turkish and Egyptian troops stand guard along Arabia's coasts.

The Arabs call him a great fighter—a reputation he won when he co-ordinated Iraq and Bedouin tribes in 1924 and led them against marauding bands of Saudi Arabia to the south.

Major Blubb is backed by Emir Abdullah Ben Hussein, ruler of Transjordan, and camel herders are heard to say Emir Abdullah has sworn by the Koran that the blood of his men will flow with that of Englishmen to keep Germans out of the hills.

NEW PROPOSALS FOR DOMINION CONTROL OF TAXES

Ottawa.—A revamped Confederation setup to smooth the path for a full realization of objectives laid down in 1867 was envisioned in an historic report of the royal commission on Dominion-provincial relations.

The commission's long-range plan, in general, would share the financial powers and responsibilities of Canada's various governments for the attainment of "real autonomy" for the provinces in local matters and give effective control in fields where national interest is paramount. Jurisdiction is also shared.

The plan calls for Dominion assumption of entire responsibility for relief of unemployed employables, which would have meant an added Dominion expenditure of $50,000,000 in 1939. It also calls for the federal government taking over all existing provincial debt, involving service charges of around $60,000,000 a year.

The sweeping financial plan, which is the core of the commission's proposals, would cost the Dominion government approximately $40,000,000 a year under present conditions.

To compensate the Dominion, the provincial governments would be asked to withdraw from the income, corporation and inheritance tax fields, which could be expected to yield about $65,000,000 a year. They would also give up their present right to subsidize the Dominion, which average around $20,000,000 a year.

Where this transfer did not enable all provincial governments to provide a national minimum standard of services and balance their budgets without excessive local taxation, the federal authority would provide supplementary funds to take care of the deficiency.

These national adjustment grants as they are termed, would amount to $14,000,000 annually at present, according to calculations of the commission's research staff after appraising the economies and taxable capacities of the nine provinces.

In addition to these basic adjustment grants, which would be irrevocable as first calculated and reviewed every five years, emergency grants would be provided to meet temporary crises in the provinces. They would be reviewed every year. At present Saskatchewan is the only province eligible for such additional aid, because of drought and world grain market conditions, in the commission's view.

The financial scheme would improve the position of every province government, although in varying degree, the report claimed. It would provide a secure and relatively stable financial future for the provinces, since the most fluctuating taxes would be levied by the Dominion with its broader base.

This tax transfer would permit a much simplified public finance structure which in turn would permit more unified fiscal, monetary and economic policies in Canada. They would be reflected in the general welfare of the Canadian taxpayer.

The present "inefficient and wasteful" tax structure, the commission reported, "sabotages" efforts to increase the national income and even depresses that income. While the proposed plan would not involve reduction of the absolute tax level, the commission said, it should permit substantial increase in the national income, which would make the present tax load relatively lighter.

Strength Of Air Force

Maximum For Wartime 5,500 Officers And 41,000 Airmen

Ottawa.—Wartime strength of the Royal Canadian Air Force has been fixed at 3,500 officers and 41,000 airmen, according to an order-in-council tabled in parliament.

Adopted on Feb. 23, the order states that the strength mentioned shall be the maximum, and shall include the permanent active air force, the special reserve, and such members of other British Empire air forces attached to the R.C.A.F. temporarily.

He will assume his post with other officers at the society's annual meeting in Winnipeg, June 19-22.

Tank Warfare

Carried On A Scale Never Before Attempted In History

Paris.—Unprecedented tank warfare, on a scale never attempted in military history, is forcing officers commanding tank units to work out their strategy and tactics right on the field of battle.

With no previous similar actions of this type or scale on record they have to get out of difficult situations as best they can, military sources said.

The officer commanding one tank group was carrying out a vanguard operation through a deserted village. He got out of his tank to investigate a number of empty houses when he suddenly was encircled in a surprise offensive by enemy tanks. He fought off the German detachment single-handed until he was rescued by counter-attacking French troops.

Another officer commanding a group of tanks during an advance was blasted out of the opening in the turret of his machine by a German land mine. Unscathed, the officer scrambled to his feet and led the rest of his tanks safely through the mine field on foot despite intensive fire from German advance positions.

A former cavalry officer, now assigned to a motorcycle corps, turned his cavalry experience to good advantage during the battle. While riding in a sidecar at the head of his detachment he suddenly came up to barricade erected in a village street by the Germans. He hesitated for a moment and then ordered a charge against the barricade in the best tradition of his cavalry.

His machine crashed through the barricade with the cars of the rest of the group right behind him. Motorized artillery detachments following up the motorcycles then opened fire on the breach with 75's and 10 German tanks were destroyed.

Threats Of Invasion

A Hot Reception Awaits Enemy Agents In Britain

London.—Threat of enemy invasion is arousing people of this island to a fever not felt since the time beacon fires signalled the message that the Spanish armada was approaching.

A hot reception is planned for enemy agents, whether they be spies, saboteurs, or disguised as nursing sisters, farmers or chorus girls, or whether they come wearing their own uniforms.

British are making plans to turn any aerial invasion into a macabre dance of death.

Anthony Eden's broadcast appeal for volunteers to combat parachutists brought such instantaneous response from John O'Grada to Land's End that many police stations were unable to cope with those clamoring to serve their king and country. These volunteers range in age from boys to grandfathers.

Berlin reported: British authorities also advise relatives of casualties some time before the news is published.

Will Be Notified First

Relatives Advised Of Casualties Before News Is Released

Ottawa.—Relatives of Canadians serving with the army, navy or air force will be notified of any casualties 24 hours before the news is released for publication, it was learned here.

The department of national defence, it is understood, will withhold such information from publication or use in radio news broadcasts until a full day after relatives have received notice.

British authorities also advise relatives of casualties some time before the news is published.

Subversive Activities

Hamilton, Ont.—City council in a resolution asked that the federal government enact protective legislation to disfranchise persons convicted of subversive activities. The Ontario government was requested to introduce legislation "disqualifying such persons from holding any public office."

Got Military Summons

Oxford, Eng.—Ald. James Ray, 71-year-old dean of the Oxford city council, has received an official summons for military service. He suggested to authorities that they bring him a bath chair. "Why have you met with an accident?" inquired the man at the other end of the line. "Yes, I was born too soon," Ray quipped.

America Warned

Should Make Rapid Preparations To Meet Possible Invasion

London.—The Daily Express, one of the newspapers owned by Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's newly-appointed minister of aircraft production, said in an editorial:

"If as a result of the German victory in the Low Countries... Britain ceases to control the Atlantic, the possibility of invasion of America is at hand."

"Americans therefore have a period in which to make preparations. They should do so on a scale larger than anything that ever has been known."

QUICK RESPONSE FOR VOLUNTEERS FOR HOME DEFENSE

London.—British "minute men" responding to a government call for volunteers, jammed police stations after a German conquest of Holland which brought the Nazi air force within 30 minutes' flying distance of the British coast.

Germany has obtained 18 Dutch civil and military airbases, the closest within 112 miles of the coast. German long distance planes are now able to fly freely across Holland from bases in Germany.

Anthony Eden, the new British secretary, appealed in a radio speech to the nation for large numbers of volunteers for his local defence force. Though the danger to the country of parachutist troop landings ought not to be exaggerated, Eden said, the British government has laid full plans for the prompt defeat of any German parachutists who might dare a landing in Britain.

The result of Eden's appeal was that within a few minutes of the broadcast, thousands of boys and men were crowding to volunteer.

General Sir Walter Kirke, commander-in-chief of the home forces and aide-de-camp to King George, took charge of the anti-parachutist volunteers.

As the army recruited the volunteers, the admiralty requisitioned all motor-craft between 30 and 100 feet in length. It is believed that some if not all of the boats will be used to reinforce in-shore patrols to meet any possible attempt by the Germans to bring troops across the English channel in small craft and land in sparsely populated coastal areas.

Anti-Profitteering Order

London.—Preparing for the big fight, the new British cabinet issued a drastic anti-profitteering order, fixing prices of medium grade clothing, boots, shoes, furniture, cutlery, radio sets, gramophones, bicycles, perambulators, clocks, watches, drugs, soap, candles and matches. Prices of cheaper clothing were already fixed.

HAS DUTCH ORDERS

The Netherlands Minister to Washington, Dr. A. Loudon, above, who was instructed to act as general paymaster for all Dutch diplomats and other officials abroad following the German invasion of Holland.

War Echoes

Houses In England Are Shaken By Blasts In Belgium

London.—Gunsfire from the battles raging in Belgium and France shook houses at Deal on the south-east coast of England.

Deep vibrations which lasted for a full minute rattled doors and windows.

Similar distant rumblings were heard earlier in the day.

The tremblings were described as so violent that they resembled an earthquake.

Each rumbling was heard approaching like a mighty wind, first murmuring in the distance and increasing to crescendo violence as the windows and doors rattled.

All day long rumblings were heard and felt along the coast. They brought back memories of the war a generation ago when fighting raged in Flanders across the channel—some 80 miles eastward.

Entertain Troops

Sir Harry Lauder To Give Concert For Men At Aldershot

Aldershot.—A rare treat awaits the hardy men of the Canadian first division who have little time for recreation while finishing their training.

Sir Harry Lauder, Scotland's celebrated singing comedian, is coming to Aldershot to stage a series of concerts for the special benefit of the Canadians. He and his supporting company of all-star entertainers will make a four-night stand.

Receives Appointment

London.—Appointment of George Ignatieff, Rhodes scholar from Sherbrooke, Que., as third secretary of Canada House is announced.

WHEN THE BELGIAN ROYAL FAMILY PRAYED FOR PEACE

When this photograph was taken King Leopold of the Belgians had just left Saint Gudule church at Brussels after praying that war may not again descend upon his little country. With His Majesty are his mother, Queen Elizabeth, and the Princess Josephine-Charlotte. War has come, but Belgians are a brave people and are determined to hold the Nazi hordes as long as possible.

War Rations

Reduction In Rations Of Butter, Bacon And Sugar In Britain

London.—A reduction in rations of butter, bacon and sugar was announced by Lord Woolton, the food minister, in reviewing the situation created by loss of Dutch and Scandinavian supplies and the need for vital shipping space.

The butter ration will be cut from eight to four ounces per person a week, starting June 3. The sugar rationing will be cut from 12 to eight ounces a week starting May 27, and the bacon ration will be reduced "soon".

The food ministry said the reduction in sugar allowances was due to the partial failure of the British West Indies crop and the need for conserving currency resources.

Lord Woolton, who gave Britons a pledge that "whatever happens you shall have food," warned that "this is no time for speech-making. It is a time for action."

Air Rulings

New Planes May Alight At Specified Airports Without Advance Notice

Ottawa.—Regulations regarding international airlines operating into Canada were relaxed in an order-in-council made public, and planes of such airlines may now land at 11 specified Canadian airports without first receiving permission.

Previously such permission had to be obtained from customs inspectors before flights into Canada were made. Now planes may alight at the airports and pilots report to customs inspectors on arrival.

The 11 include airports at Winnipeg, Lethbridge, Vancouver and Whitehorse.

ALLIES TAKING THE INITIATIVE IN AIR FIGHTING

London.—General headquarters announced in a brief bulletin that the British Expeditionary Force in Belgium, "after hard fighting," had held successfully "serious German attacks."

Lending emphasis to reports that the Allies have taken the initiative in the air was a statement in the headquarters bulletin that the air component of the B.E.F. had destroyed at least 124 enemy planes since the German offensive started.

(Havas News Agency estimated at 750 the number of German planes shot down since the Reich's grand scale western offensive began. Wreckage of 690 Nazi planes has been found, Havas said.)

The air ministry disclosed that in fighting at Sedan the Royal Air Force was pounding German troops in Belgium with such violence that the reported loss of 35 British planes was considered "not excessive" in the light of the results achieved.

The Allies have taken the initiative in the air, despite Germany's boasted air power. This was established by recent developments and by the fact that the British and French turned loose the greatest coordinated bombing attack in aerial history.

Correspondents with the British expeditionary force in Belgium telegraphed London that the Allied air arm was fighting the Germans "to a standstill" in a mighty encounter; and the air ministry announced "repeated low-flying attacks on enemy troops."

The biggest fleet of bombers that ever worked in unison, 150 British and French machines, halted the German advance over the Meuse river in the Sedan area, enabling French troops to launch counter-attacks.

Dropping low over long columns of German men and machines, the Allied bombers attacked in waves, stemming the forward march of the field grey legions by destroying bridges, wrecking tanks, blowing up roads and scattering German troops.

In operations of this sort the R.A.F. has been using low level bombing with its deadly accuracy but inevitable risk from ground defences of the light automatic type. Planes often loop as low as 100 feet, releasing their bombs in "sticks" or patterns, straddling the long narrow columns of troops and transports in the knowledge there will be enough hits to compensate for the added risks.

On the home front authorities heard without comment Berlin broadcasts that the Reich army was "standing at England's door" with fighters less than an hour away by air.

BRITONS URGED TO DISCOURAGE WARTIME RUMORS

London.—Alfred Duff Cooper, new minister of information, said in a broadcast, his first since assuming his new duties, that "we at home should be as well prepared to receive bad news as those in the battle line are prepared to receive bullets from the enemy."

Not all rumors are as laughable, he said, as the one being spread by the Germans that "the King is packing up his trunks and leaving for Canada immediately."

"Such rumors make us laugh," he said, "but other rumors only a little less absurd might make some faint-hearted people tremble."

He urged his hearers not only to "refuse to believe rumors yourselves but also to discourage those who spread rumors and sow in them the enemies of public confidence. People who do should be reprimanded and then punished if they persist."

The minister quoted Lord Hail, British commander-in-chief in the last war, as saying "no news is ever so good or so bad as it sounds when you first hear it."

"I would advise all listeners to remember that saying as often as they can in the days that lie before us, when sensational news is reported to them," Mr. Duff Cooper declared.

He conceived his duties as minister of information to be giving "the people of this country a maximum of information in a minimum of time."

"Accuracy and speed should be our two objects," he said, "but accuracy interferes with the other, but accuracy should come first."

"I am sure you will agree with me that it is better to get your information a few hours later and get the truth than to get it a few hours earlier and be either unduly depressed or unduly elated by news that subsequently turns out to be false."

May Tighten Restrictions

Situation In Regard To Enemy Aliens Being Watched Closely

Ottawa.—Col. H. Stethem, assistant director of internment operations, said that "the government's management of enemy aliens in Canada is contemplated at present but the situation is being watched closely."

It has been suggested the grip on the alien problem might be tightened up, he stated, but so far there has been no change in government policy since war broke out.

"Any manifestation of German sympathy or subversive activity will lead to internment but there is nothing planned along the lines of the sweeping internment in Britain to meet the possibility of Nazi parachute troops landing in England."

Col. Stethem said some interned aliens had been released and from now on "we may think twice before releasing any more."

Miner Invents Safety Catch

Granted Patent For Device For Shaft Cages And Elevators

Cadomin, Alta.—A patent for a safety catch for shaft cages and elevators that was invented as the result of the death of a brother in a Nova Scotia mine was held by Charles Jacob, a miner employed by the Cadomin Coal Company.

Cadomin is 175 miles west of Edmonton.

Jacob has received word from his solicitors that Canadian patent rights have been granted on the device which works on a wedge idea. He said that due to simplicity of its construction, the safety catch would be comparatively inexpensive.

Jacob said he had been working on the idea since his brother was killed in an accident in a Nova Scotia mine two years ago when a "trip" crashed to the bottom of an incline killing several workers.

Australian Pilots

Melbourne.—Air Minister J. V. Fairbairn announced that 2,000 Australian pilots and 3,500 observers and gunners will be called up under the Empire air scheme before the year end. The first Australian air personnel will leave for advanced training in Canada in August.

Wounded Reach England

London.—Between 200 and 300 British casualties from base hospitals in France and Norway arrived at a Liverpool station. A convoy of ambulances took the wounded, half of whom were stretcher cases, to a military hospital.
